Drama League Players Announce

Players will hold a meeting in the school. Mr. Denman in his will has set collection of historical documents and Public Library next Saturday night at Drafting Instruments. Schmidt, 719-21 13th 8 o'clock, to form an organization sons desiring to become members are invited to be present.

According to Bertram Bloch, director, the Drama League Players expect to produce at least one original play by a local author during their winter season, which opens November 16, at the Wilson Normal School, with "Lady Patricia," by Rudolph Besier. This new confederation of authors is expected to furnish much interesting material, in addition to manuscripts already on hand.

Among the original plays now in the Among the original plays now in the hands of the play-reading committee, and the only one yet definitely selected for production, is "The Iron Cross," by Elmer Reizenstein of New York, author of "On Trial." The Drama League Players will give this play its first presentation on any stage in the course of its season of six productions.
